CALL FOR PANELS

ARCHEO.FOSS XVII | 2023

International conference on Open software, hardware, processes, data and formats in archaeological research

Open science and archeology: archiving the knowledge

The seventeenth edition of ArcheoFOSS will be hosted at Torino University on 12-13 December 2023 in collaboration with Scuola di specializzazione in Beni archeologici Giorgio Gullini, Historical Department.

This edition will be based on panel sessions that provide an opportunity for expert panel members to present their views and share their experience on a specific topic and then engage in a discussion with the audience.

We are welcoming original proposals from both community members and external scholars or professionals willing to discuss research questions and experience and stimulate further discussion of specific topics. As well-known, the ArcheoFOSS conference is traditionally focused on the dissemination of archaeological projects following the Open Science paradigm: open source software tools, open formats and open methodology both for investigation and dissemination.

Panels

Panelists, therefore, should clearly state how their proposal meets one or more of the following topics:

- Use and reuse of open software in archaeology.
- Digital Library and open repository in archaeology.
- Public archaeology: theory and methods.
- Reflection on communication in archaeology: tools, methods and case studies.

A typical panel session starts with a brief introduction by the panel chair, followed by the presentations of three or four panelists. The expected duration of each workshop session is 2 hours.

Proposals

We welcome proposals (1-2 pages) on these and related topics. Proposals should be sent, together with a short bio-bibliographical statement including indication of affiliation, by 10 August to callforpaper@archeofoss.org. Please give your email the title "AF2023 proposal".

Open Review process

All proposals will be published in a not anonymous, peer-review process.
